PICTURE PLAYS ON WEEK'S PROGRAM

Current Bills in Photo Theaters Feature Many Stars.

After one has seen a moving picture featuring Douglas Fairbanks, one wonders what on earth the young man found to do before the movies were popular. The amount of action packed into the new Fairbanks' film, "in Again—Out Again," which is showing at Loew's Columbia Theater this week, is harraising. Any effort to recall Mr. Fairbanks in one of his stage appearance of raising. Any effort to recall Mr. Fair-banks in one of his stage appearance of neveral years ago is almost a failure. We say almost, for there is a fleeting memory of a young man with arms and legs always at angles, like compasses, and a dim recollection of a gorgeous stage fight which was pulled off every night at the same time for months. glas Fairbanks of the stage did of the Doug of the films.

Immense Screen Spectacle Tells Four Epochal Stories.

When D. W. Griffith produced "The Birth of a Nation" those who witnessed the performance were willing for him to retire—to sit back and rest on his well-earned laurels. But however, fascinating and gripping the film story of the war between the States, Mr. Griffith's "Intolerance," shown for the first time in Washington at the National last night, eclipses the former production both in dramatic appeal and in its spectacular scenic effects.

There are four stories in the production. Mr. Griffith's inspiration in furnishing real plots for each of them was a happy one. The scenic effects are colossal—it seems the only word to describe them—but throughout the several hours required to show the film, the interest of the audience is strictly retained as each ce is strictly retained as each of the four plots is unwoven.

Cest of Production Immense.

Intolerance, the motive of the tragedy of Gethsemane, the fall of Babylon, the persecution of the Huguenots, all the pain and sorrow of man through the ages, is shown. One has to do with a modern sociological condition, and the story is woven around a little group of the underworld in a great city, put in their environment by the intolerance of a selfish, hypocritical employer.

Then there are two pretty little love stories, one set in the medieval period

Much has been told of how Griffith produced the scenic wonder—how much it cost—how many actors were used, and no account would seem exaggerated on witnessing the spectacle the first time. Babylon, in all her rich and harbaric splendor, is shown in minute detail. The busy crowds of marchants at the city state, the nedminute detail. The busy crowds of merchants at the city gates, the ped-dlers, the showmen, and, in contrast, the splendor and luxury of the court of Belshaszar is shown true to tradi-tion and history.

187,000 TRY TO JOIN ROOSEVELT DIVISION

T. R. Offers Services as Brigadier, Ninth in Corps Rank.

NEW YORK, May 7 .- Col. Theodore Roosevelt, through sheer force of patriotism, prestige, and personality, has recruited 187,000 men eager to follow him to France to fight against the Germans. The rosters at head-quarters of the "Roosevelt Division," 753 Fifth avenue, contain the names of rather more than three times as many volunteers as the Government has been able to get.

Since February 2 responses have poured in from every State in the Union.

The figures indicate that the ex-President could have at least 300,000 fighting men if he wanted so many. He doesn't. The big problem of the quiet enlistment for the Roosevelt division has been to sift and selecfrom an overwhelming flood of appli cations just the type and characte
